Multiple Sclerosis

Multiple Sclerosis is a serious condition, which damages the central nervous system-the brain and the spinal cord. MS occurs as a result of scarring the myelin sheath that insulates cells in the nervous system. This distorts the passage of nerve impulses between the brain and other parts of the body. It interferes with the brain's ability to control such functions as seeing, walking, talking etc. It's called multiple because many scattered areas of the brain and spinal cord may be affected and symptoms can be mild or severe and come and go unpredictably.

Multiple Sclerosis is the most common neurological disabling disease affecting young adults throughout Europe. More than 9,000 people in Ireland are living with MS and in some parts of Ireland the rate is 1 in 400. The prevalence is higher in Northern Ireland and Scotland. There is yet no conclusive reason for this although intensive research has been carried out.

The typical age of diagnosis is the late twenties to mid-forties, when family and career are usually the priorities. Twice as many women as men have MS. There is as yet no known cure.

There is no typical MS, it is individual to each person, the progress is unpredictable so one general description or prognosis is not possible. This leads to other problems, not only do people with MS have to learn to cope with the disease, there will also be pressure on members of the family to take on the role of carer. Symptoms of MS include impaired mobility, severe fatigue and cognitive difficulties.
